PLEASANT VIEW -- Impact fees for new construction will be higher beginning in October.

City council members voted unanimously to increase the impact fee for a one-inch service hookup from $550 to $650. This will mean large construction, such as apartment buildings, could pay a hefty impact fee for multiple hookups.

City Administrator J.J. Allen told the council it could approve any amount from zero to $657.92 for the impact fee. He said the impact fee will be paid when a building permit is issued and if someone is building something like multiple apartment buildings in phases, the fee will be paid when the building permit is issued, even if some of the buildings won't be constructed until later.

The increase in impact fees was part of a new sanitary sewer capital facilities plan adopted by the council.

Mayor Doug Clifford said the $650 impact fee should help cover future projects and repay those living in the city whose impact fees have helped pay for past projects. He said by approving a higher fee, the city is improving its ability to complete future projects.

"The old growth has already paid for a lot of the facilities, so new people coming in need to pay their fair share of the infrastructure," said Clifford.

Clifford said the state passed a law that impact fees have to be spent within a certain window of time or given back.

"This crazy law that was forced upon us gives us just a six-year window," said Clifford.

Allen said the capital facilities plan includes upsizing the pipe on 600 West from 2550 North to 2800 North. He said the pipe will be upsized from 12 inches to 15 inches to accommodate growth in Pleasant View.

Allen said there needs to be a sewer outfall installed near Rocky Point and Highway 89 and also the city needs to eliminate a sewer outfall behind homes at 700 West and Pleasant View Drive.

"We need to get that out from behind homes and out of their backyard," said Allen.
