

NATIONAL IMPACT FEE SURVEY: 2011<sup>1</sup>

This report summarizes the results of a detailed survey of impact fees that individual jurisdictions across the country are charging. Unlike in-kind developer exactions, impact fees are expressed in dollars and have published fee schedules, making it easy to compare fees charged by different jurisdictions. The results of the survey reveal where impact fees are most common, how much jurisdictions in various states are charging, and the types of facilities for which fees are being charged. Comparisons with surveys from previous years also show how fees have been changing over time.

Structure of the Survey

The survey that follows this introductory text<sup>2</sup> contains, for each jurisdiction, the amount of impact fees (and similar charges) by type of facility (roads, water, wastewater, etc.) for five typical land use types: single-family detached, multi-family, retail, office and industrial. Residential fees are per dwelling unit; nonresidential fees are per 1,000 square feet of building area. The “updated” column gives the date we last verified the fee amounts, not the date that the jurisdiction adopted the fees.

The survey data is presented in 35 sheets, seven sheets for each of the five land use types. The jurisdictions are listed in alphabetical order, by state, county and jurisdiction. The last page for each land use summarizes average fees by state and for the nation. For example, page seven (of the survey data, not this summary text) provides the average fees for single-family detached units.

What Qualifies as an Impact Fee?

The multitude of names used to refer to impact fees is one obstacle to developing an accurate survey of such fees. Common terms used to refer to impact fees include “capacity fees,” “facility fees,” “system development charges” and “capital recovery fees.” Their common characteristics are that (1) they are charged only to new development, (2) they are standardized fees as opposed to ad hoc, negotiated payments and (3) they are designed and used to fund capital improvements needed to serve growth.

Utility Connection Fees. Water and wastewater connection fees that are used to fund growth-related capital improvements should be classified as impact fees. However, connection fees often mix impact fee components with service fees that cover other types of costs, such as the purchase of a water meter, the inspection of the connection, or the administrative cost of establishing a new customer account. This presents the researcher with a problem. Counting only clearly-labeled water and wastewater impact fees is likely to under-represent them, but seldom are there sufficient resources to interview local officials to determine what portion of a connection fee is actually an impact fee. In addition, because water and wastewater fees preceded other kinds of impact fees, they are often less controversial than other types of impact fees. For these reasons, it is often useful to look at “non-utility” impact fees separately from total impact fees.

Fees-in-Lieu. Fees charged in-lieu of land dedication for parks and schools are conceptually very similar to impact fees, and should also be counted in an impact fee survey. Essentially, they function much like an impact fee for the land component of the facility. Indeed, some communities use an impact fee for the construction cost component, and combine that with a land dedication/fee-in-lieu requirement for the land component. In California, park fees in-lieu of land dedication are known as “Quimby fees,” after the name of the 1966 state act authorizing such fees. Because they are not labeled as impact fees, land dedication fees-in-lieu are often overlooked in impact fee surveys.

Development Taxes. Another class of fee that is functionally very similar to an impact fee is the development tax, which is sometimes also referred to as a development excise tax, privilege tax or facilities tax. This is a tax that only applies to new development, often on a per square foot basis, and is earmarked for capital improvements. For example, Boulder, Colorado hired consultants to conduct a nexus study and adopted an ordinance that had all of the trappings of an impact fee ordinance, including earmarking of funds for specific types of capital facilities and providing credit against the charges for developer-constructed improvements, but instead of adopting them as impact fees adopted them as development taxes. This survey includes development taxes.

Some Caveats

The results of impact fee surveys can be misinterpreted. This can be avoided if the reader keeps the following caveats in mind.

Not Exhaustive Samples. Like most impact fee surveys, this survey only includes communities that charge some impact fees, and excludes those that do not. Thus, an “average impact fee” must be understood as an average fee for those communities that charge impact fees, not as an average for all communities. Although in California state limits on local taxing authority and relatively liberal impact fee enabling legislation have combined to make impact fees virtually universal, in most other parts of the country, communities that have impact fees (other than the ubiquitous water and wastewater connection fees) still tend to be in the minority.

Not Random Samples. Impact fee surveys tend to be opportunistic. For the most part, the inclusion of a community is determined by how readily available the information is. Communities that post their fee schedules on their web site are more likely to be included in a survey than communities that do not. Consultants who compile surveys are more likely to include communities that have been clients or that are in the same region with former clients. For example, our firm compiled extensive surveys of impact fees in Arizona and Florida for client communities in those states. For these reasons, the fact that a state is not well represented in a national survey does not necessarily mean that the state does not have many impact fees (although that may be true).

Average Total Fee or Sum of Average Fees. In this chapter, average fees are presented for a variety of capital facilities. These averages exclude communities that are represented in the survey but do not charge impact fees for the particular facility type. One could sum these average fees by facility type, but this “sum of the average fees” does not represent the average fee for communities that charge impact fees. A more meaningful statistic, and the one reported here, is the “average of the total impact fees” charged by all communities represented in the survey.

Only Published Fees. The fact that a community does not charge a particular impact fee does not mean that developers make no contributions to that type of capital facility. This is particularly true in the case of roads, because many communities without road impact fees require developers to dedicate right-of-way and often to make substantial improvements to abutting roadways as a condition of development approval. In communities with road impact fees, developers who are required to make in-kind contributions receive credit against their impact fees for the value of those contributions. Thus, developers may contribute more on average to the cost of major road improvements in communities without road impact fees than in communities with modest road impact fees.

Eligible Facilities

State enabling legislation obviously influences the kind of impact fees that local governments enact. In most states, local governments have the authority to impose impact fees for water and wastewater facilities, although they may be called something else. The types of facilities that are eligible for impact fees in the various state impact fee acts are listed in Figure 1 (it should be noted that water and wastewater impact fees may be authorized under separate legislation).

It is noteworthy that only 10 states authorize school impact fees or development taxes. School impact fees are found almost exclusively in Florida, California, Washington and Maryland (where they are authorized in some counties by special acts of the legislature). School impact fees tend to be high fees that are imposed only on residential development, and their prohibition in most of the country is an indication of the political clout of homebuilder associations.

Fee Incidence by State

As noted earlier, this survey is opportunistic, so the number of jurisdictions represented in the survey is not proportional to the actual incidence of impact fees. Nevertheless, the survey jurisdictions do provide some indication of the states where impact fees are most common. The 2011 survey includes 274 jurisdictions (plus 9 Florida counties that have suspended all of their fees, and so are excluded from the average fee totals). Not surprisingly, the surveyed jurisdictions are concentrated in the South and West, especially Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, Colorado and Florida (see Figure 2).

SURVEY JURISDICTIONS BY STATE, 2011

Average Fees by Facility Type

Average impact fees per single-family detached dwelling by type of facility are graphically illustrated in Figure 3. The total amount of impact fees charged by jurisdictions surveyed in 2011 averages $11,908. Excluding utility fees, the average total fee is $8,422. School impact fees, although not charged in many states, are the highest, followed by water, wastewater, road and park impact fees. Police, fire and library fees, on the other hand, tend to be relatively low. General government facility impact fees and stormwater drainage impact fees are relatively uncommonly charged--general government fees are not authorized in most states, and drainage fees are difficult to implement because they generally must be based on a comprehensive drainage master plan.

Average Fees by Land Use

Average impact fees by land use type are presented in Table 1 and illustrated in Figure 4. Except in the few states where school fees are charged,<sup>3</sup> road, park and utility fees are the primary components of total fees for residential land uses. Other types of fees tend to be small (fire, police, library) or infrequently charged (general government or drainage). For nonresidential land uses, park fees are seldom charged, and road and utility fees are the dominant components of the total fee.

<sup>3</sup> Florida, Washington and Maryland have extensive and significant school impact fees. California's school fees are widespread, but are capped by State law at a relatively modest level.

Average Fees by State

Average single-family impact fees, excluding water and wastewater utility fees, are illustrated for states with at least four jurisdictions included in the 2011 survey in Figure 5. Total fees for the majority of states start at less than $1,000 in Arkansas and, with the exception of five states, peak at under $7,000. It is not a coincidence that three of the four states with the highest fees – California, Maryland and Florida – are all states with large numbers of school impact fees, which as seen earlier are the highest facility fee per single-family unit. The average total single-family fee in California ($23,849) is more than double that of the second-highest state, Maryland ($11,248). It is probably also not a coincidence that the states with the most jurisdictions charging fees also tend to be the states with the highest fees.

AVERAGE NON-UTILITY FEE PER SINGLE-FAMILY UNIT BY STATE, 2011

Changes from 2010

Compared to last year's survey, the overall average total impact fee charged increased by 1%, while the total average non-utility fee decreased by 1% (water and wastewater fees increased by 4-5%). The average school impact fee decreased by almost 4%, while park impact fees increased by almost 5%. The average road impact fee was basically unchanged from 2010.

In terms of the average non-utility fee charged by states, the most notable change was the 12% decline in Florida, from $8,960 to $7,862 per single-family unit. Fee reductions have been widespread in Florida in the last several years. Florida had the second-highest average non-utility fee in 2010, after California, but fell in 2011 to fourth place, after California, Maryland and Oregon.
